To Whom This May Concern:

Elaine Cooperman worked as an adjunct instructor in the mathematics department at the College of Southern Maryland for the summer 2002 and fall 2002 terms.

Elaine's work as an instructor was excellent. Her student evaluations were exceptionally high for a new instructor. The students found her classroom activities to be well organized and clear. As the department chair, I appreciated her ability to work independently, meet deadlines, and the accuracy of her records and grades.

From this brief association it is clear that Ms. Cooperman has a lot of ability and potential to work in the educational field. If she were available, I would certainly continue to provide her with teaching opportunities at the College of Southern Maryland.

Sincerely,
